

11 Secret Store Policies That Will Save You Money

Marissa Laliberte

These little-known perks will change the way you shop.

ALDI: More than just your money back

If you get home from ALDI only to realize one of its private-labeled items is moldy, you're actually sort of in luck. The grocery store's "Double Guarantee" promises not only to refund your money, but also to give you a replacement product to make up for it. Just don't assume every return will qualify; employees report it doesn't apply when you decide you just don't like the taste.

Athleta: Return after wearing

You don't always know that your leggings aren't comfy in yoga until you've actually worn them in class, and Athleta gets that. The store's "give-it-a-workout guarantee" lets you do just that: wear it for exercise, then bring it back if you aren't happy. Oh, and no rush: There's no limit on how long you can wait to make your returns. Here are 14 more stores with the best return policies.

Staples: Not just price match, but price better

It's not uncommon for a store to have a price-match guarantee to make sure you buy it there instead of from a competitor, but Staples will do you one better. If you show proof of a better price at another store or online, the store will drop its price to match it, plus take another 10 percent off. If you're working on home improvements, Home Depot has basically the same policy.
